Survive. This story goes into more detail about Heathers on-again off-again relationship with Nicolo. Heathers family came from the poorer side of town, so she was surprised when Lance, from an affluent family, took a shine to her and wanted to start dating. Feeling pressure from her High School friends, especially her best friend Brooke, and her family, she agreed to date him. Even against all her misgivings, she found herself married to the selfish, overbearing Lance. The problem was, she's really in love with Nicolo. So this is a tale of love lost and the missed chances in life. When I read Heathers character in Cheating To Survive, I felt empathy for her plight. But after reading how she let herself end up in such a loveless, hate filled marriage, I can't. Everything that happened to her, was her own choice. Heather is supposed to be a free-thinking, out-of-the-box person, so I just can't see her marrying someone that wanted to change her. I guess it's because I faced a similar situation in High School. The boy who wanted to marry me was just as controlling as Lance. But I chose me over him. Who I really felt sorry for, was Nicolo. He was stood-up, twice, by Heather, without any explanations. He tried to go on with his life, but everywhere he turned, Heather was in his memories. Eventually, he settled for second-best, not realizing the trap he'd made for himself. This book goes into plenty of detail from High School to the hospital that Heathers working at in the first book. After that, it kind of skips and feels rushed. If I hadn't read the first book, I think I might have gotten lost in the whys and wherefores of her actions. Even though I don't like the younger Heather, I did sympathize with the older Heather, after she had to live with her consequences. The whole point of a story is to make you feel, whether good or bad, and Christine accomplished that purpose. I fell in love with Heathers children and I was happy with her victory over Lance and Blanca, the mother-in-law from hell. There are a lot of emotional ups and downs in this well-written tale, so keep a box of tissues handy. I enjoyed this book and recommend it for all romance lovers. I give it 4 feathers.

KurzbeschreibungCan be read as a Stand Alone or part of The Fix It or Get Out SeriesMany Try to Keep them Apart....Destiny's Determined to Keep them TogetherWhen Nicolo, a vibrant new employee starts at Heathers job, he ignites a fire inside her giving her a glimpse at an adventurous future, and she finds herself second-guessing her boring future as a lawyers wife. But before she reveals her true feelings, a jealous boss fires Nicolo, leaving Heather with no chance of finding him. Five years later during a rare night out, fate reunites them and that old spark is still very much alive. Captivating and sexy, Nicolo shows her what's been missing in her life. Torn between losing him again and the emotions she can no longer suppress, they launch into a powerful love affair. Heather discovers true passion, and knows she must leave her fianc before she surrenders to an unfulfilling future. As she prepares to tell him, Heathers life is torn apart again. Fate continues to step in, making sure Heather and Nicolos paths cross every five years. Destiny's determined to keep offering another shot...if they're brave enough to grab it. Every Five Years is a witty, heartfelt story of true love and what happens when life keeps getting in the way. Full of intrigue, laughter, and love.

ber den Autor und weitere MitwirkendeI loved reading as a child, and looked forward to my father taking me to Barnes Noble to buy a new book. At 10 years old, I was obsessed with Nancy Drew and collected over twenty of her books, devouring them in less than four hours, unable to wait for my next one. In 6th grade I wrote two novels, I called them The Linda Wells Mysteries. I wrote them in a battered spiral notebook, complete with several hand drawings! It was then that I decided I wanted to write a real novel one day. But when I graduated high school, the thought of majoring in English scared me. What would I do when I graduated? Sit home all day and write books? I was afraid, and with no guidance, I chose Nutrition as my major, and received a Masters in Exercise Physiology. My two other loves. Although I went on to love activities like weight lifting, rock climbing, white-water rafting and jumping out of airplanes, there was something missing: no real goal, no end point to reach for. One boring Saturday evening in September, I sat in front of my computer and decided to write. It became an obsession. Something I buried away for years had finally unleashed. It was my passion. Storytelling. Something I lost sight of as I traveled down my conveyor belt of a life. It was all I wanted to do. So here I am today, to let you know that I wrote 2 contemporary romance novels, Cheating to Survive and Every Five years, with the hope that someone will love them as much as I loved writing them.
