two different times and locations. During World War II, Laura and her little son Freddie are still living in the family home; Charles is determined to never let someone else have Laura. In 1988, Sofia Aspioti tries to get over Danny; her life in Brighton consists of studying, clubbing and dreaming of The Lady of the Pier. With The Lady of the Pier: The Storm, Effrosyni Moschoudi has created the intriguing final book of her paranormal romance trilogy: The Lady of the Pier. The Lady of the Pier: The Storm is an entertaining and fast read, has a great flow, being an expertly woven story. I was drawn into the story right away. I felt close to what happened in both times and countries. All relevant characters became so real that I related to them. Effrosyni's descriptions create a live sensation i.e. you easily see, hear, and smell. Laura Christian, Sofia Danny are not unusual for their times; fate isn't always kind. I cried with them, I laughed with them and they are now a part of my own memories. This is a book and/or series to read again. Highly recommended.

Kurzbeschreibung Two worlds. One haunting. One love that won't let go. When Sofia falls in love, a mourning spirit begins to haunt her... The Storm, a World War II romance, is the concluding part of the trilogy that merges the stories of Sofia and Laura into one. Now, redemption seems finally possible... BRIGHTON 1988 Sofia does her best to get over Danny, but The Lady won't leave her in peace. The spirit guides her to meet more people who knew Laura, and now begins to haunt Danny as well. What will happen when he wears Christian's scarf? And who is the third person being haunted, and why? BRIGHTON 1940 Laura is relieved to hear about Christian's narrow escape from Dunkirk, despite his serious injury. Things at home are as harrowing as ever, but she holds on to a glimmer of hope. When he discovers an old secret, Christian returns to Brighton. Will the old sweethearts find happiness at last or will Charles never allow it? Kurzbeschreibung Two worlds. One haunting.
