"Poignant, Fullfilling, and most of all tender to the heart"
Von Ein KundeThe Unfastened Heart leads you through a tribulation of winding gates and doors to be opened. Mariela, the enchantress, has a magical glow to her, and brings a small sometimes sad smile to your lips. It is a modern day romance, and yet it has nothing like the other 'romance' novels do, it possesses heart, and detailed writing. So I guess you could say its not just a romance, but more of a book about the understandings of life.0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. a wise love storyVon Ein KundeThis book is wonderful, not only because it's not a typical stupid romance, but because it is so fabulously well-written. Ms. Von Hartzen has so many wise things to say about love and relationships and says them so beautifully. I normally hate romance novels, but this one is filled with truth, as well as a bit of mysticism, and I loved it!0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. beautifulVon Ein KundeThis book is so beautifully written, you have to savor each word. She said things that made me stop to close my eyes and catch my breath. The characters often seem mystical, but somehow you believe that it could all be true. Read "The Unfastened Heart"!

Kurzbeschreibung"There's something magical about this novel, and not just because its heroine is a mystic and a healer of broken hearts. No, the magic is more than the content; it's as though the lilt of von Herzen's prose generates alpha waves. As soon as you start reading, you're soothed, suffused with both tenderness and an expectant alertness. The novel takes you into a verdant world of flowering trees, songbirds, fresh baked bread, statues of saints and women. These are the Cordojo women, a group of friends united by the nurturing guidance of Anna de la Senda. Anna "lives for love," that is, she helps people cope with the anguish and confusion that love and its absence bring, in spite of the fact that she hasn't loved a man since her husband left her and their ethereally beautiful daughter, Mariela, a dozen years ago. Now 18, Mariela is consumed with desire for her black-haired and poetic neighbor, Addison. As their love flourishes, Anna and Addison's widowed father gravitate toward each other, and soon trouble and passion surge into their lives like a summer flood. Every character and every scene in this romantic, funny, creative, suspenseful, and enchanted novel is compelling, and every sentence is wrought with grace, perception and lyricism." -- Donna Seaman -- BooklistKurzbeschreibung"There's something magical about this novel, and not just because its heroine is a mystic and a healer of broken hearts.
